7. Description Of Incident

We were both going on starboard to the left side of the course, (she was below and Infront, I was above and behind). We were going with a right shift, when a left shift hit her. She thought she can tack and fit in front of me, but due to the fact that she tacked instantly in the left shift, I didn't get the shift yet. She was going on port while (5-10seconds) on port (that's when I warned her first), but for the reason that I didn't get the shift yet, she wasn't able to fit in front of me on port tack, and I had to duck to not hit her. I instantly yelled protest and for her to do the penalty. If I don't duck, I hit her boat at about the part of the ILCA logo. With this she broke rule 10, on opposite tacks.
