7. Description Of Incident

The boat sailed downwind toward the finish line, with the headsail to the opposite side of the boom ("butterfly" style).

A pole was used by a crew member to keep the headsail open (not the spinnaker pole; not a whisker pole; the pole resembled the hook stick of the boat). The end of the pole was on the headsail clew, while the other end was held by a raised hand of the crew member. This is a breach of ORC Rating Systems 208.4.
